To whom it may concern

The Liberal Catholic Apostolic Church (LCAC) is a free, liberal church following a catholic charism with followers around the world. Based in the United Kingdom and established as a not for profit corporation limited by guarantee, the provinces of our church in other countries have their own establishments and constitutions and are independent from the church's UK headquarters in respect of property ownership, liability, accounting records, finance and compliance with the national laws that the said province exists in. The headquarters in the UK provide spiritual oversight, religious guidance and leadership, and the province is subject to the canons (rules) of the church. The province shall always defer to LCAC headquarters in matters of prayer, apostolic succession, worship charism, vestment charism and spiritual direction. However, in all other respects the province is independent, accountable in itself and responsible for its own debts and actions.

It is a condition of our canons (rules) that no money shall be used at headquarters level, that is between headquarters and the provinces or dioceses, however each province or diocese may own property or raise funds and be liable for all compliance and liability that arises from such activity. The headquarters is not and never shall be, liable for these aspects of the provinces or dioceses.

Our province in Ghana is called the Greater Life Evangelistic Temple (GLET), a body who have joined LCAC in the manner described above. GLET continue their work and their spiritual direction and authority derives from LCAC; their prayerful work on behalf of LCAC in Ghana means they can also use the name LCAC-Ghana, and may use our logo's, house style and charism. Bishop Emmanuel K. Mensah is for the time being their bishop, acting on our spiritual behalf.

Copies of the GLET charter (licence) and constitution are enclosed as paper copies. LCAC canons (rules), codes of conduct and procedures are available for reference at www.liberalcatholics.co.uk and any further request for information may be made by email to liberalcatholics@btinternet.com
